My question is: Why this mismatch? How to fix this issue? Is it due to some bug in Activator 3.8.6 or MS Office 2016? A: Following the comments, I downloaded the Office 2016 Activator and ran the command again: msiexec /package {D3254A9E-9A73-4D8B-AEFC-A5F00A14DEF9} /quiet /qn.\Office2016.msi /l*v C:\Users\Ehsan\Desktop\Activator\Office2016\MSIX\log.txt And now it's working fine. Q: Find amount of work from n inputs to n outputs Im trying to solve the following problem: I have n inputs and n outputs for a piece of equipment. How many different ways could I operate the equipment? I think a good way is to create combinations of the possible input, and then count the amount of ways that the combinations result in the same output. EDIT: I found this way to get the total amount of operations: n!/(n-k)!*n^k and it works for the first example, but I also have to count the reverse operations. So if I have input: 1,2,3 and output: 1,1,2 I would have to count the input: 2,3,1 and output 1,1,1. A: Your sum is correct, but you've made a mistake: you only need to count sequences of length k with respect to the output you're looking for. So, if you have n outputs, you want to sum over all sequences of length k with respect to them. In your language: n inputs $X_1, X_2, \ldots, X_n$ and k outputs $Y_1, Y_2, \ldots, Y_k$. This has $C(n,k)$ possible sequences, so that's your answer.
